You'll see Camron Pagan a lot because he has trespassed and loitered Motel 6 for the past three months--longevity makes him a regular there plus benefits.

Without him, Motel 6 would feel lonely--Motel 6 really leaves the light on for him because there's no one else out there. If you hang-around long enough Motel 6 gives you a pair of Timberlands and access to the laundry room in the event of a storm or if you need a soda or a break from it all. He sometimes connects with Tahmez Davidson who also doesn't live there; what they talk about is loitering--it's all the both of them do. Pagan, though, gets around, like that black-and-white cat you got over there--he has a route, too, so comes over, goes to Putt-Putt then it's back to the graveyard. So far, Pagan and Davidson haven't run into each other coming around corners. Pagan came by your window today so is just getting started; I'm fairly certain he was screaming his head off at 2 AM recently but was too lazy to look--he does that sometimes during the day so it was probably him. He asked if he could borrow my microwave but getting it out of the pawn shop would probably cost me more than my deposit plus damages so I told him "No." I was also too lazy to disconnect it; it's 1000 watts so is a beast thanks aw
